

Angelina Lynn

Achievements

- » Didn't study hard enough for my SATs, so set my sights low for college applications
- » Rejected for membership of student academic club
- » Had to petition to retain my academic scholarship after a disastrous semester
- » Ran and lost secretary position for creative club
- » Graduated early in order to escape the sleep-deprivation torture of college
- » Succeeded in garnering rejections from 20+ companies
- » Thinking of giving up and going into real estate

College Internship

Raised work productivity -35% during a 6-month period; made it to the virtual officeplace on-time every day (give or take five minutes); had at least two connection-forging conversations with the boss; gave the passable impression of listening to others' opinions.

College Work-study Job

Did homework during work hours; interacted with upwards of 10 people a month; nearly consistently missed the weekly time sheet submission deadline; was encouraged to do as little work as possible in order to secure my government-granted funds.

High School Fast Food Service Job

Failed in a high stress, fast paced environment; survived the coworker hazing of drinking way too much coffee; accidentally charged someone $30 instead of $3 and couldn't figure out how to reimburse them but successfully stalled until my manager came back from the bathroom; memorized tens of drinks, even if half of them were memorized incorrectly; came to work faithfully, even through a blindingly painful infection (perfected the preventive measure of slav squatting behind the counter when there were no customers so that I did not pass out from the pain).

Volunteer Position

Interacted with kids with minimal disgust and anguish; failed to negotiate a pay raise with management; followed through with the organizational system by ignoring the screams of elementary schoolers. Sufficiently navigated the obstacle of coming to work hungover by disguising my symptoms and only yelling once. No children were injured while I was in the area.